WASHINGTON — The Democratic-led House Judiciary Committee is moving to compel the release of a secret FBI background report on Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh. The committee on Friday sent letters to the FBI and the White House seeking the report as part of Kavanaugh's background investigation, even as Senate Republicans blocked a similar request from the judiciary panel. It's the third time since President Donald Trump nominated Kavanaugh to the Supreme Court that Democrats have raised questions about his background as a federal prosecutor under the George W. Bush administration. The Senate Judiciary Committee released a similar report earlier this year after a hearing at which Kavanaugh testified. In a statement, House Judiciary Committee ranking member Rep. Jerry Nadler, D-N.Y., said Democrats agreed to the administration's request for the report to allow for greater transparency on the Kavanaugh background investigation. "Judge Kavanaugh will receive the same careful vetting that was provided to Judge Garland," Nadler said, referring to Judge Merrick Garland, whom Democrats unsuccessfully tried to nominate to the court in 2016. "We look forward to examining that full record, which includes Judge Kavanaugh's record as a judge on the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals and the Administration's review of that record, along with other relevant materials." Kavanaugh's nomination hangs in the balance as White House aides, Senate Republicans and the FBI weigh the possibility of moving forward with the nomination amid sexual assault allegations against Kavanaugh dating back to when he was in high school. Democrats say there is reason to question Kavanaugh, who has previously been accused of sexual misconduct, even though he has denied wrongdoing. Rep. Democrats say that the FBI has not been properly preparing Kavanaugh for his confirmation hearing Tuesday and Wednesday. The administration is reviewing thousands of pages of documents, including a three-year-old letter from a Yale classmate of Kavanaugh's who
